What makes someone super?

You don't need to fly or have super strength to be a superhero. Being kind, brave, helpful, creative and caring can be pretty super, too! Every day at Lurie Children's, kids, families, doctors, nurses and other hospital helpers show their own kinds of strength.

What's your why?

Why do you think it's important to fundraise and help others?

Everyone has a different reason—and there is no wrong answer! When you know your why, it can inspire you—and others—to make a difference!

Maybe you want to help sick kids feel better, be a superhero for someone in need, make your community a better place, or just help another kid have a happier day.

Write your why in the frame below.

Together, we make a big difference!

You don't have to work at a hospital to help kids at Lurie Children's.

When your school raises money for Lurie Children's, you're helping give kids and families the care and support they need.

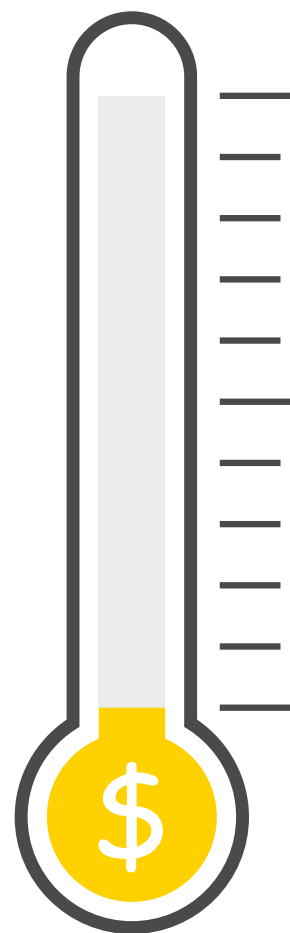

Your fundraising can help:

- Lurie Children's care for more kids
- Our researchers make discoveries
- Provide art and music programs
- Support our school services team
- Provide visits from Hawk, our facility dog

My Fundraising Goal

I want to raise $ _____

I will raise money with my school by

Thank you for being a superhero!

We are proud of you for helping your school give back to Lurie Children's!

By rallying your school community, family, and friends, you help support kids and families at your local children's hospital.

When you fundraise, show your school spirit, and choose to help, you are helping kids like you who may be spending time at the hospital instead of at school, at home, or with their friends.

Your kindness can help make a hospital stay a little brighter, support families during challenging times, and help doctors and researchers find new ways to help kids get better.
